Park History

Delta Lake State Park is located on a peninsula extending into Delta Reservoir. An ancient glacial lake once filled the area where the Village of Delta was located, now the site of Delta Lake. After the battle of Fort Stanwix in 1777, a settlement was established six miles north of present day Rome. It is speculated that the early settlers derived the name of the growing village from the fact that the bend in the Mohawk River, where the settlement was located, resembled the 4th letter of the Greek alphabet, Delta. In 1850, the village prospered with the completion of the first section of the Black River Canal, which opened up an efficient trade route to Rome and the Erie Canal.

The village continued to grow and prosper until 1908, when the state began construction of a large reservoir to provide water for the enlarged Barge Canal System, and to eliminate the spring flooding problems that plagued Rome. Two hundred families were relocated and 10 miles of roads, seven canal locks, one aqueduct, and 295 buildings were removed. With the completion of the Delta Lake Dam in 1912, the 2560 acre reservoir quickly filled to a depth of 70 feet, thus ending the existence of Delta Village.

In 1966 park development was begun, and by 1968 day visitors were enjoying the lake and picnic grounds. Camping facilities were established in 1970, attracting more visitors to the Central Region's only state park located on a peninsula.

CAMPER ALERT: DON'T MOVE FIREWOOD

A new regulation is now in effect that prohibits moving untreated firewood more than 50 miles from its source. The regulation also bans importing firewood into New York unless it has been kiln-dried to kill invasive insects. You can help protect forests and campgrounds from tree-killing insects and diseases.

- Leave firewood at home - do not bring wood from home to campgrounds or parks.
- Only use firewood from local sources, or wood that has been heat-treated to kill pests.
- Burn ALL your wood before leaving your campsite.
